We rears ago, the steps to the "Lattle Greek temple" have served as a resting place for the weary, a sort of rendezvous for men of leisure and meeting place for young fellows to idle away the evening hours in the good old summer time. After three-quarters of a century of common use, those steps will be used only by parties who have business with the bank, and there will be no more leitering on the premises.

Complaint has been filed with Town Solicitor Agard by the bank officials against the continued use of the bank building front as a loitering place. and Chief of Police Brown has in consequence extended the "move on" order to apply to those who have been in the habit of resting or hobnobbing on the bank steps. This order is not only applicable during banking hours, but at all hours, day and night. Toefforce the order a policeman was Many of the members of tite John

Thirty-six years after the formation of the Washington bank, now the Washington bank, now the Washington Trust company, in 1888, the present bank building was erected, and since that time two additions have been made. It is said to be the first building constructed of Westerly granite and is supposed to resemble the Athenian Parthenon. Ever since it was erected 78 years ago, the steps to the "Little Greek temple" have for some time efforts have been made to have the Willett grave markod in a fitting mannier, and it is largebeen accustomed to rest on the granite bank steps at periods from collidhood to old age, and with the tacit consent of the officers of the Washington Trust company.

On his return to New York Mr On his return to New York Mr. Strong interested the members of the City club to such an extent that a committee was appointed from that body to take up the matter. This committee has been looking up the records relating to Thomas Willert and his Zandia and look Sarmed et al. (1997). relating to Thomas Willett and his family, and last Saturday visited Mrs. White and later went to the cemeiery and laid out plans for the marker. The committee consists of Alexander H. Spencer. Dr. Louis Livingston Seaman. a noted African explorer, and Charles H. Strong, all of New York. Mr. Spencer is one of the committee of two appointed by Mayor Gayner of New York to have a bronze tablet placed to the memory of Thomas Willett in the New York city hall.

The committee made the trip from New York to Riverside in a large 60 granite memorial. It is very likely that the marker will be a huge granite boulder, with a suitable inscription cut in its face. It was at first intended to have a bronze tablet bearing an inscription placed upon a boulder, but owing to the fact that several of the bronze tablets have been recently stolen Com graves in other places it was thought better to make the inscription cut in the stone itself.

The boulder will be placed near the head of the grave, with the inscription toward the north, facing the entrance to the cemetery. None of the stone or markers now about the grave will be moved.

will be moved.

When the movement on the part of the New York people was first made known it was feared by some of the residents of Riverside that an effort would be made to have the remains of the mayor removed to New York, and any such plan would have been stren-uously opposed. The committee from the City club of New York, however, had no such intention, and when on their visit here Saturday declared that no more suitable or attractive spot could be found for the noted man's
